CLOVIS HIGH SCHOOL TEACHER RECEIVES CAREER AND TECHNICAL EDUCATION TEACHER OF THE YEAR AWARD

The New Mexico Association for Career and Technical Education (NMACTE) recently announced Amy Garcia as the 2018 NMACTE Teacher of the Year. The announcement was made April 4 during the NMACTE Conference held at the Embassy Suites in Albuquerque.

The CTE awards promote merit in career and technical education by recognizing individuals who have made extraordinary contributions to CTE, programs that exemplify the highest standards, and organizations that have conducted activities to promote and expand CTE programs.

The NMACTE Board of Directors select winners after candidates complete an application process, which includes the individual's contributions and accomplishments to the program.

Ms. Garcia has been a Career and Technical Education teacher with Clovis Municipal Schools since 1999. As a state winner, Ms. Garcia will progress as a Region finalist in her category and will be recognized at the 2019 Region Conference in Oklahoma City.

For more information regarding the Career and Technical Education awards, please visit the association's website at www.acteonline.org/awards.

Congratulations Ms. Garcia!
